

What is Climate Justice?

Plymouth Climate Hub Public Meeting:
16th March, 7pm in-person at the Sustainability Hub, Kirkby Lodge, Kirkby Place, University of Plymouth and on Zoom - a shared discussion about climate justice and how to get it. Details on our webpage:

The actions that must be taken to prevent the collapse of human societies caused by climate catastrophes are actions to protect humanity.

It is the poor who are being hit first and hardest by environmental collapse and extreme weather.

In Britain, the housing crisis includes 2 million homes unfit for habitation and at least 14 million homes requiring urgent insulation to manage extreme cold spells and heatwaves.

Any hope of the UK meeting targets for emissions reductions as part of the global targets for all countries to their bit is lost if we do not reduce car use. That means investment in affordable, frequent and integrated public transport fuelled by renewable, fossil-free electricity.

We also need to renationalise utilities - electricity, fuel, water & sewage services, refuse & recycling, to end pollution and ensure low-emission provision to all households, organised to meet the needs of everyone not the private profits of a few super-rich at the expense of people and planet.

Global Justice!

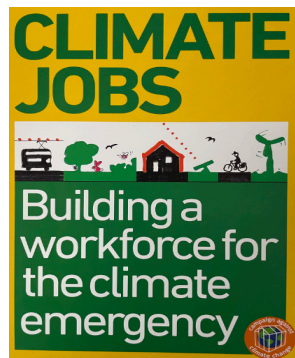

Climate change does not respect nations or human boundaries. Preventing collapse requires international co-operation and reparations for the hardest hit across the Global South, with planning, reorganising production and distribution for the whole of humanity.

The changes to production recognises that many current jobs will soon be made redundant, unaffordable and outdated as the climate catastrophe hits. We need to plan for a Just Transition, with redeployment, retraining and up-skilling with protected pay and employment rights away from fossil-fuelled industries and into Climate Jobs Now!

Trade unions have the most vital and urgent role to play in fighting for climate justice and negotiating for workers rights in the climate emergency.

Aggravated Activism Day
15th February 2023

Over the years, campaigners have been called many names: 'subversive', 'agitator', 'domestic extremist', and now 'Aggravated Activist'. We are taking this new label and owning it, as one we are proud to embrace!

If you're not aggravated you're not paying attention!

The latest laws are criminalising protest and strike actions, targeting activists and trade unionists, and giving Police free rein to stop protest.

some laws are unjust

Celebrate activism on 15th Feb and be proud to campaign for liberty and democratic rights.

Extreme and unpredictable weather events are causing havoc with food production and distribution, and causing civil and international wars for food and supply security. Wars cause suffering and huge warming emissions. They must be stopped. Join the protests and affiliate to the Stop the War Coalition:

A racist offensive is sweeping Europe, with governments and the right-wing media using migrants, refugees and Muslims as scapegoats for an economic crisis and wars they did not create. The climate catastrophe is causing starvation and forced-migration for tens of millions right now, with the UN identifying 500million homeless by 2040 in Africa alone. Climate activists must challenge racist laws to say "Refugees are Welcome Here!" Join the national demo on 18th March in London.
